

Notes on Contributors

ELAD BEN DAVID (Ph.D., the Department of Middle Eastern Studies at Bar Ilan University in Israel). His Ph.D. research dealt with Da'wa (call to Islam) in America, emphasizing Muslim preachers and Islamic organizations, focusing on the doctrine of Yasir Qadhi. Ben David is also a research associate at the Forum of Regional Thinking (FORTH), an independent Jewish and Arab research institute, and the Middle East Network Analysis Desk at Tel-Aviv University. His studies have appeared at many academic conferences and scholarly platforms, and he also executes as a board member of the Israeli Association for the Study of Religions (IASR).

eladbd608@gmail.com

EMILY R. GILL is Caterpillar Professor of Political Science Emerita at Bradley University. In addition to a number of articles and book chapters, she has written three books: Becoming Free: Autonomy and Diversity in the Liberal Polity (Kansas 2001); An Argument for Same-Sex Marriage: Religious Freedom, Sexual Freedom, and Public Expressions of Civic Equality (Georgetown 2012); and Free Exercise of Religion in the Liberal Polity: Conflicting Interpretations (Palgrave Macmillan 2019). Along with Jason Pierceson and lead editor Gordon A. Babst, she has also co-edited Moral Argument, Religion, and Same-Sex Marriage: Advancing the Public Good (Lexington 2009). She is the past president of the American Section, International Association for Philosophy of Law and Social Philosophy.

gill@fsmail.bradley.edu

JAMES L. GUTH (Ph.D., Harvard University) is William R. Kenan, Jr., Professor of Politics and International Affairs at Furman University. A specialist in American and European politics, his recent work has assessed the impact of religion on the electoral process and public policy issues. He is the coauthor or coeditor of several books, including The Bible and the Ballot Box: Religion in the 1988 Election (1991), Religion and the Culture Wars (1996), The Bully Pulpit (1997), The Oxford Handbook on Religion and American Politics (2009), and Religion and the Struggle for European Union: Confessional Culture and the Limits of Integration (2015). In 2023 he was a co-recipient of the inaugural Lifetime Achievement Award of the Religion and Politics Section of the American Political Science Association.

jim.guth@furman.edu

JAJUAN S. JOHNSON (Ph.D. Arkansas State University) is the Mellon Postdoctoral Research Associate for The Lemon Project at William & Mary. As a public historian and heritage studies scholar, his research explores the power of places of difficult histories to cultivate public emotion and generate a collective sense of community in the aftermath of traumatizing events of the distant and recent pasts. He was a 2022-2023 Cultural Vistas DAICOR Fellow, a transatlantic network of experts who promote an inclusive and progressive culture of remembrance in public spaces in Germany and the United States. He has been published in Ethnohistory, Southern Cultures, and the Arkansas Review: A Journal of Delta Studies.

writejajuan@gmail.com

LYMAN A. KELLSTEDT (Ph.D., University of Illinois) is Professor of Political Science (emeritus) at Wheaton College, Illinois. He has authored or coauthored numerous articles, book chapters, and books in the field of religion and politics, including Rediscovering the Religious Factor in American Politics (1993), Religion and the Culture Wars (1996), The Bully Pulpit (1997) and The Oxford Handbook on Religion and American Politics (2009), and Evangelicals and Immigration (2019). In 2023 he was a co-recipient of the inaugural Lifetime Achievement Award of the Religion and Politics Section of the American Political Science Association.

lyman.kellstedt@gmail.com

SEBASTIAN KUBAS (Ph.D., Jagiellonian University) works at the Faculty of Law and Administration, Jagiellonian University, Kraków, Poland. He is a specialist in constitutional law. Current research concerns the judicial review procedures in the United States. He has recently published a book devoted to the myth of the Marbury v. Madison case and to the figure of Chief Justice John Marshall (Warta na obrzeżach Konstytucji: dekonstrukcja mitu założycielskiego amerykańskiej sądowej kontroli konstytucyjności prawa).

sebastian.kubas@uj.edu.pl

MICHAEL MCLAUGHLIN (Ph.D., Florida State University) is an Assistant Teaching Professor of religious studies at the University of Missouri where he teaches courses on religion and race in the United States. His ongoing research traces the religious roots of the Black Power movement.

mmclaughlin@missouri.edu

HUSAM MOHAMAD (Ph.D., University of Cincinnati) is Professor of Political Science at the Department of Political Science of the University of Central Oklahoma. He previously taught at Zayed University in the UAE, Qatar University, the Eastern Mediterranean University in Cyprus, and the Junior State of America Foundation. Husam was the recipient of the Fulbright Scholar Award in 2008, and the Brandeis University Fellowship in 2009. He has published several journal articles, book chapters, reviews, and short communications addressing Middle East politics, Israeli–Palestinian relations, U.S. policy toward the Arab and Muslim world, democratization in Arab politics, and Islamist movements across the Arab region.

hmohamad@uco.edu

PAULINA NAPIERAŁA (Ph.D., Jagiellonian University) is a political scientist, and Assistant Professor at the Institute of American Studies and Polish Diaspora, Jagiellonian University. Her research explores the intersection of religion and politics in the United States. She has published two books on this topic (2013, 2015), two edited volumes (2013, 2016), and a number of articles and book chapters. Currently, she is focusing on the socio-political role of the Black Church. She was a grantee of the Kosciuszko Foundation (2015, 2022), the Fulbright Commission

(2007–2008), and the National Science Centre Poland (NCN 2019), which allowed her to conduct research and consultations at Boston College, Harvard University, CUNY, and Valdosta State University.
p.napierala@uj.edu.pl

BRENT F. NELSEN (Ph.D., University of Wisconsin-Madison) is Jane Fishburne Hipp Professor of Politics and International Affairs and Director of the Tocqueville Center at Furman University where he has taught since 1990. His teaching and scholarship focus on Europe and the European Union with an emphasis on religion and politics. He is the co-author of Religion and the Struggle for European Union: Confessional Culture and the Limits of Integration (2015). His most recent book is The North Sea System for Petroleum Production (2024).
brent.nelsen@furman.edu

KÁROLY PINTÉR (Ph.D., Eotvos Lorand University, Budapest) is Associate Professor and currently Chair of the Institute of English and American Studies, Pazmany Peter Catholic University, Budapest, Hungary. He has published a book on literary utopias of Thomas More, H.G. Wells, and Aldous Huxley. His other major interest is American studies, particularly the U.S. Constitution, the American Presidency, and church-state relations in the United States. He was Visiting Scholar at the Nanovic Institute of Notre Dame University in 2017.
pinterk@gmail.com

CRISTÓBAL SERRÁN-PAGÁN Y FUENTES (Ph.D., Boston University) is Full Professor in the Department of History, Philosophy, Religious Studies, and Interdisciplinary Studies at Valdosta State University, GA. He is the author of Saint John of the Cross: His Prophetic Mysticism in the Historical Context of Sixteenth-Century Spain (Pacem in Terris Press, 2018). He is currently serving as the editor of a special issue entitled “Mysticism and Social Justice” for Religions, an international journal. He has presented papers on King at different international conferences and has published articles on King and the Civil Rights Movement. At Valdosta State University, he was a member of the Martin Luther King Planning Committee and was part of the MLK Annual Celebration Week of events.
cserranPagán@valdosta.edu

JEROLD WALTMAN (Ph.D., Indiana University) is the R.W. Morrison Professor of Political Science Emeritus at Baylor University. He taught at Louisiana College and the University of Southern Mississippi before coming to Baylor. His past research has ranged over tax policy, minimum wage policy, and American and comparative constitutional law. Currently, his research concentrates on comparative constitutional law. He has published a number of articles, book chapters, and books, including Principled Judicial Restraint (Palgrave, 2015) and Congress, the Supreme Court, and Religious Liberty: The Case of City of Boerne v. Flores (Palgrave, 2013). He also served as editor of the Journal of Church and State.
jerold_waltman@baylor.edu